

Frame Your Design Challenge

Using what information you know about Fulbrighter's with Disabilities based on our in-class discussions and/or your own research of the organization, please answer the following problem questions:

1. What is the problem you are trying to solve? (This is in relation to the chapter's need for a website.)

Creating a community space for the chapter where all information can be displayed in one place, including virtual community events and forums.

2. Take a stab at framing it as a design question. (ex. How might we...?)

How might we create a virtual community space for the Fulbright Disability Chapter that is functional, informative, and accessible?

3. What are some possible solutions to your problem? (give examples of how some of the problems the organization could resolve by creating a website)

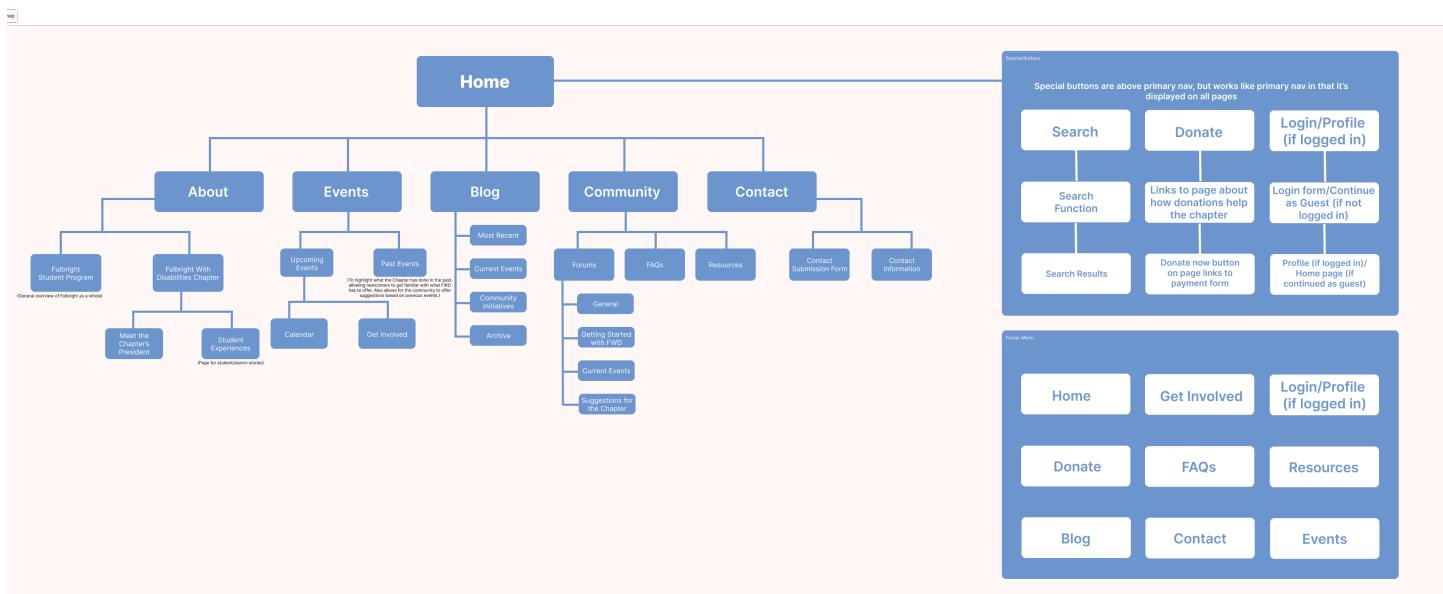

- Utilizing clear and easy to use navigation
- Creating a forum for members to communicate
- Utilizing a calendar and events page to maintain clear points of reference, easing the burden of manually tracking
- Creating a space for donations for disabled scholars who are in need of financial assistance

4. Finally, write down some of the context and constraints that you're facing. (Ex. Since this project is in a class with limited time, the website designs might not have enough time to truly be researched to see if it would work well for disabled people..etc.)

Not enough time for one on one interactivity and research, which will limit the amount of feedback received. We will have to be extra cautious to not assume the feelings of others throughout the design process, even with the limited time to research and conduct interviews.

5. Does your original question need a tweak? Try it again. (This question doesn't have to be different than your first, but after answering questions 2-4, did it stay the same, or did you pivot towards a different way to propose the problem you are trying to solve?)

- How might we effectively conduct research in order to design an accessible website for the Fulbright Disability Chapter?
- How might we create a website design that is welcoming, clear with its information, and fully accessible?
